I confess! I love horror movies! I can handle zombies, serial killers, vampires, shapeshifters, werewolves, bloody teen slashers, anything dark, vomiting kind of disgusting, irritating, nerve bending, even I can tolerate to watch Fox news for five minutes or predatory animals' adventures on National Geographic Wild! I have high pain tolerance. But this book FROZE MY BLOOD, BLEW MY MIND AND TERRIFIED THE HELL OUT OF ME because it's so dark, depressing, mind-f*cking, horrifying and REALISTIC!

I keep reading the news and see the winnings of right-wing populists at all over the world starting from European countries to Brazil, including some of the Eastern, Middle Eastern countries and of course in the US.

Think about yourself in a world that you're not fleshy human being with full of emotions, beliefs, opinions, decisions. Your full value could be integrated in an unique number. The number consisted of your smartness, your financial capabilities, your pure genetic perfectness (you need to be white, healthy, fertile, without any psychical or mental disability)

They call your number "Q" which identifies who you are, what you are capable of, which school you may attend, where you could live, what the ideal occupation you could focus on. As a summary your Q is your path finder.

It never tolerates with immigrants, LGBTQ community, mediocre or low IQ-ed population, disability. See welcome to the new world is created by incarnated Hitler youth! (I know at those pages I used several "F" words and spent all of my coins for cursing jar!)

So this quiet brilliant, provoking story is not only about the criticizing the political system and scaring us about probable balance changes, it is also about Elena Fairchild who is brilliant teacher, exemplified citizen of the system with her high Q point.

But few years ago she made two terrible mistake. For getting approval of her mean girlsâ€™ club she harassed a loner girl in her high school who ended her life and the other mistake was she chose to marry with a wrong guy who became a predator to serve the system for creating True Aryan Genesis. Malcolm Fairchild , has a respectable position in the government and works on genocide project to form an unique populated society consisted of white, rich, intelligent, chosen American people. (Oh Malcolm, I havenâ€™t read about a pure evil since I read true crime books about Manson family so you over exceeded my expectations! I donâ€™t know how many times I screamed â€œBurn in hellâ€• when Iâ€™m reading your parts! By the way, why do you carry similar name with Morgan Fairchild- a.k.a Chandler Bingâ€™s mother- I love the authorâ€™s quirky and dark sense of humor!)

Growing up, Elena never imagined that the plans she and Malcolm Fairchild outlined would become the framework for our government. If only Elena could turn back time..

Now married, with two children, Elena and Malcolm are on different sides of this extremely difficult agenda. Anna is an outstanding student with the best Q score, while Freddie has an extremely low Q. Freddie just failed her most recent exam and has received a yellow card and will be shipped off to a boarding school in Kansas on the next bus. As a Government Official, Malcolm is supportive of this outcome, while Elena, a Teacher at an Elite Green School, is not, yet doing something to help Freddie would take extremely drastic measures.

To say that Christina Dalcherâ€™s writing astounds me is not enough. The fact is, I cannot do this novel justice. I simply adore her writing. A follow up to â€œVoxâ€• - I had no idea what I was in for reading â€œMaster Classâ€• all I can say is that it was worth the wait.

I don't often read science fiction. But I can really appreciate a well done dystopian book that has a premise taken from the current state of affairs. Master Class proposes a world where a child's future is totally based on a standardized measurement, their Quotient. This score acts as a caste system, determining education and job possibilities. It doesn't take into account other strengths, such as artistic ability. Or even the concept that a person might be a genius in one area but not all. Or

I don't often read science fiction. But I can really appreciate a well done dystopian book that has a premise taken from the current state of affairs. Master Class proposes a world where a child's future is totally based on a standardized measurement, their Quotient. This score acts as a caste system, determining education and job possibilities. It doesn't take into account other strengths, such as artistic ability. Or even the concept that a person might be a genius in one area but not all. Or God forbid, somewhere on the autism scale. It's the exact opposite of The No Child Left Behind premise. This is Eugenics 2.0.

I did wonder if I was the only one that saw a similarity between the head of the Dept of Education in the book and Betsy DeVos. In the book, Elena's husband works for this Betsy DeVos takeoff and fully supports the party line. So much so, that when his younger daughter's Q number slips, he's willing to just let her go. But Elena is not. But then she's faced with a Sophie's choice type of dilemma.

This book is scary and depressing. It was one of those books I had to keep putting down because it was freaking me out. Malcolm, the husband, made me cringe. How he could turn against his younger daughter is just appalling.

The book also points out how often we, as people, are willing to turn a blind eye to something until it affects us personally.

I didn't read Vox, but having finished Master Class I definitely want to go back and read it. Dalcher has that unique ability to take a premise and draw it out to its scary future possibility. This book raises some truly meaningful questions.

My thanks to netgalley and Berkley for an advance copy of this book.
